Seoul/Washington, D.C. – Checkmate Government Relations on Monday announced its latest international office, located in Korea and led by former Prime Minister Han Seung-soo.

Han Seung-soo, a decorated public servant in Korea who is respected around the globe, was a minister of finance and trade, an ambassador to the United States, and a president of the United Nations General Assembly.

The announcement follows Checkmate's July expansion into Japan, its first office outside of the United States.

"Our firm is honored to partner with a world-renowned and widely respected leader like Prime Minister Han Seung-soo," said Ches McDowell, Checkmate's Managing Partner. "Our international growth is a testament to our team's talent, work ethic, and diverse skill sets. No problem is too big or complex for Checkmate to solve."
